Keeping Money Home

The value of keeping money at home is now being appreciated by western insurance companies, especially those that have home offices in California. The arguments advanced are identical with those put forth by merchants and business men in patronizing home industry. In this connection the Los Angeles Examiner recently published the following with regard to the insurance question:

"The Trans-Mississippi congress when in session called attention to the fact that too much western capital and the natural earnings of individuals was being transferred to the east and that for the protection of the west it should cease. An incident of it is in the life insurance funds.

"Californians paid $12,567,907.95 for life insurance in 1907, 90 per cent of which went to eastern insurance companies.

"This outflow of millions should cease. Think of it, $33,000 each day, $1400 every hour leaving this state for an article that can be purchased at home.

"Life insurance is a measurable commodity; the rules that govern its measurement are as accessible to a Los Angeles company as they are to an eastern company, and when the people fully understand this fact they will boost for their home insurance companies as they do their home products.

"It takes a thousand dollars to pay a thousand-dollar claim; but it takes 20 per cent more money to earn a thousand dollars during the time it takes a policy to become a claim in the east than it does in the west.

"When we send our money east for life insurance, or for anything else, we send it to the lowest money-earning market in the country, and we also send it to where they pay officers the highest salaries in the world.

"This is an economic question that affects the commercial welfare of our city and state and we cannot allow this immense sum of money to be withdrawn from active circulation without constituting a tremendous drain on our financial resources.

"Money paid for investment should be made to seek investment in the sections that create the funds. This in my opinion is the only true solution of this problem, and it is up to the people of this city and state to see that this money is kept at home. * * *"

Roosevelt Again

Charles Sumner, defeated progressive republican candidate for governor of Massachusetts, acting as the mouthpiece for Colonel Roosevelt, has declared that the ex-president will not be a candidate for the presidency four years hence. In view of the fact that the colonel has annually made such a statement, but little credence is placed in the remark. As a fact but little credibility is given any remark made by the illustrious lion hunter since he came out for the third term in violation of his often repeated statements.

Time was when Colonel Roosevelt was recognized as the greatest living American. When personal vanity was followed and his lust for power became so great that he attempted to dictate to every living American, he was relegated to the top row of the bleachers and is destined to remain in that section until he can redeem himself. If such a thing can be done.

In place of Roosevelt being the greatest living American, that honor is now being conferred upon William Jennings Bryan, and is likely to stay with the Nebraskan until some later statesman wrests the championship belt from the peerless one.

Roosevelt, by his own actions, has succeeded in being repudiated by thousands, who, in former days, were his staunchest supporters. He has also succeeded in preventing the third term precedent from being broken, and in acquiring this honor he has Hiram Johnson to divide the plaudits. The pair made a determined effort to crown their ambitions with glory and success, and the failure that resulted should compel the two to keep their peace for ever more.

It is possible that wherever the so-called progressives meet hereafter that some ambitious politician will take it upon himself to declare that the colonel will not be a candidate in 1916, but the truth will be known when the time for making nominations ceases in the next presidential election. Until that time Roosevelt can be reckoned as being an unwilling candidate, willing to run should his personal following insist.

Protecting Children

The announcement that Truant Officer Scott will seek to enforce the law that prohibits the sale of intoxicating liquors to minors, is commendable and it is hoped that the practice will soon be broken up. For years unscrupulous local liquor dealers have sold their wares to minors but no action has ever been taken and the guilty vendors have never been apprehended. In the enforcement of the law prohibiting the sale or giving of liquors to minors, the law prohibiting youths from loitering around barrooms will also be enforced.

Frequently in the last four or five years intoxicated youths have been observed walking the streets of Tonopah. In several instances an attempt was made to ascertain where they secured their liquor, but no success met the efforts of the officials. Now a thorough investigation is to be made and after the matter is sifted to the bottom warrants will be issued and the guilty parties punished. In this work the truant officer will have the assistance of every liquor dealer who desires, not only to uphold the law, but to cleanse their ranks of those who have stooped to such practices of demoralizing children.

The person who has many friends to be supplied with Christmas presents, and who happens to be broke, should be thankful that shopping terrors do not exist for him.

Ahem, have you done your Christmas shopping yet. Join the club of early shoppers. The cost is nothing but the saving is immense.

Scientists state that the fish worm is able to think. Now the price of fish bait is liable to be increased.

We wonder if President Taft will remember us Christmas.
